SUBSIDIZED APARTMENTS

Applications are available at the subsidized apartment complexes and high rises. It is advisable to call the manager of each apartment to learn of any vacancies. Many of the complexes maintain a waiting list.

Eligibility For Housing

The income eligibility for subsidized assistance is based on a projection of the income that should be received the next year. This income includes the individual's assets as well as social security and pension income. Income eligibility can range from below poverty level to above $32,600 for one person.

Apartments For The Disabled

Subsidized apartment complexes have a number of apartments specifically for those who are mobility impaired. Apartments may also be equipped with safety equipment, such as grab bars and emergency pull cords.

Monthly Rental Fee

The rent is figured by taking the monthly income of the applicant, subtracting the monthly medical costs for that person, and if the apartment offers a utility allowance, subtracting out the amount determined for utility assistance. The rent is usually 30% of this figure. The amount allocated for the utility allowance is then given back to the resident to pay the utility bill(s). If the bill(s) exceeds the allowance, the resident is responsible for paying the balance.

Services Offered

Many subsidized apartments have a service coordinator on staff to assist residents with accessing needed services in the community. Many apartment complexes also offer an activity or community room for social events that are planned by the apartment manager or groups within the complex.
